

Virginia Tech's Southern Piedmont Agricultural Research and Extension Center in Blackstone, VA is seeking an energetic and conscientious individual with training and experience in production agriculture, biology, and/or environmental science to generate, collect, analyze and transfer results from laboratory, greenhouse and field research on diseases of tobacco and small fruit crops in Virginia. Under faculty supervision, the successful candidate will interact with project leaders, the AREC farm manager, county extension agents, and growers to conduct research and to support extension activities as part of the integrated program of the Center. More comprehensive descriptions of the requirements, qualifications and preferences for this position can be found at www.jobs.vt.edu and searching on posting number SW0170344.